Xi outlines long-term vision for China focused on sustainable growth

During the month of October, the NAV of AGCM China Stars Fund SEK increased by +7.1%. The fund's portfolio companies have reported mostly strong or very strong 3Q 2017 financial results. Video surveillance leaders Hikvision and Dahua reported net earnings growth of +28% and +27% respectively and a positive outlook. Chinese home appliance manufacturers continued to ride on the urbanization and consumption upgrade trend in China. Midea reported earnings growth of +26%, Gree +24% and Qingdao Haier +145%. Chinese pharmaceutical company Hengrui continued to shine with +23% net earnings growth and progress with its broad pipeline of new products. These holdings have been the primary contributors to the fund's strong performance in October but also Alibaba reported a very strong +61% revenue growth and +71% net earnings growth for the quarter compared to last year. We believe the outlook for especially China's mainland equity markets remains bright because of the combination of strong corporate earnings growth, rapidly growing personal incomes and new restrictions on other savings alternatives for China's growing middle class such as trust fund products and real estate.

China's 19th National Congress successfully concluded in Beijing and the world witnessed a smooth formation of a new top leadership led by Xi Jinping. President Xi outlined a grand vision for a "new era", expecting China to become a "basically modern socialist country" by 2035 and a "strong power with leading global influence" by 2050. Xi emphasized the need for more sustainable growth, ensuring a high-quality and balanced economic development to satisfy people's ever-growing desire for a better life, and to build a "beautiful China" with a clean environment and technological innovations. China will keep up the "irreversible" momentum of the anti-corruption campaign during which already 1.4 million Chinese officials have been punished for corruption since Xi took office in 2013. Xi vowed to continue the effort to fight corruption in a systemic manner under the rule of law.

President Xi Jinping also highlighted the need to speed up building China into a strong country with advanced manufacturing, pushing for deep integration between the real economy and advanced technologies including internet, big data, and artificial intelligence. Chinese corporations already play an important role in these efforts. Alibaba Group recently announced it will invest more than USD 15 billion over the next three years on a global R&D program to develop new technologies, in areas of big data, Internet of Things, financial technologies, quantum computing and artificial intelligence. Hikvision announced it will invest RMB 10 billion in four R&D centers and two industrial bases in the next four years, dedicated to the surveillance technology, Internet of Things, industrial automation, automotive electronics, smart cities and more.

Google chairman Eric Schmidt says the US is at risk of falling behind China in the race to develop cutting-edge artificial intelligence. Speaking at a tech summit organized by national security think tank CNAS, Schmidt predicted that America's lead in the field would continue "over the next five years" before China catches up "extremely quickly." "They are going to use this technology for both commercial and military objectives, with all sorts of implications," said Schmidt, referencing a Chinese policy document outlining the country's ambition to become the global leader in AI by 2030. Schmidt reiterated "Trust me, these Chinese people are good."
